What is a Glass Block?

According to 'Francis D. K. Ching' (Author of book called Building Construction Illustrated), Glass block is a translucent, hollow block of glass with clear, textured, or patterned faces, made by fusing two halves with a partial vacuum inside. It is also known as a glass brick. It is a building material made from glass and its appearance can vary in colour, size & texture. Use of Glass Blocks in Home: One of the primary reasons for the use of glass blocks in residential buildings is to provide light to the interior. It can be used as facades, partitions, windows, staircase railings, and non-load bearing exterior and interior walls, etc.

Glass block can be also used in some interior work such as a contemporary shower stall, a kitchen island or kitchen backsplash, or decoration with the front door.

01. Use of Glass Block as a Facade

The façade is an elegant component that helps to determine the unique architectural aesthetics of the building. Also, it has a critical role in energy performance in the building. Glass blocks can be used as a façade in the house for energy saving.
